The search for survivors and victims is over, and all have been identified in Wednesday's thrift store building collapse at 22nd and Market.

Friends and family members on the scene Thursday laid flowers in front of a small memorial for Salvation Army employee Kimberly Finnegan, of Bucks County. It was reportedly the woman's first day of work.

Salvation Army volunteer Borbor Davis, 68, of Darby, also perished in the collapse.

Anne Bryan, a student at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, also died.

The other victims are Juanita Harmin, Mary Simpson and Roseline Conteh.

Those injured in the collapse are: Susan Randall, Betty Brown, Shirley Ball, Linda Bell, Jennifer Reynolds, Nadine White, Margarita Agosta, Richard Stasiorowski, Rosemary Kreutzberg, Rodney Geddis, Felicia Hill, Daniel Johnson and Myra Plekan.

Bryan was shopping in the Salvation Army store at the time of the collapse, according to statements.

Survivor found

Miracle on Market Street

Just a half hour after Nutter held a somber press conference Wednesday night announcing the death toll had risen to six, Kensington woman Myra Plekan, 61, was pulled from the rubble of the building collapse.

"Through a coordinated effort with OEM, L&I and police partners, we basically went through the tedious task of searching for 13 hours," city Special Operations Chief Craig Murphy said.

Plekan was rushed to the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania in critical condition, reports say.

"That's why we stay the course," Fire Commissioner Lloyd Ayers said Thursday. "This person being pulled out alive is what this rescue operation is all about."

Plekan was the last victim to be recovered from the site. Search and rescue operations drew to a close Thursday evening, as the investigation into the cause of the fatal collapse intensified.

"Anne started as a full-time student in our Certificate program in fall 2012," PAFA CEO David Brigham wrote. "She began her journey with us in our High School Summer Academy in 2006, and enrolled in Continuing Education classes as well."

Bryan's family also released a statement stating they've suffered "a devastating loss."

"Anne was a brilliant and caring young woman just entering the prime of her life. She was an incredibly kind and loving person, and her death has left a hole in the hearts of all who knew her," they wrote, noting the young woman's generosity, talent and passion for the arts.

"That she will not be here to continue to touch the lives of those around her is of intense pain to all of our family and her friends. This pain is fresh, and it runs deep."

Bryan was the daughter of city Treasurer Nancy Winkler.

City Council President Darrell Clarke in a statement released Thursday offered his condolences, saying his "heart breaks."

Mayor Michael Nutter identified several individuals who helped search for survivors, including Jordan McLaughlin, Ray Kauffman, Bill Roam, Patrick Glynn and Brian Mullins.

"On behalf of the city," Nutter said in a statement, "I want to thank them for their quick thinking and courage."

Nutter said a "wide-ranging" investigation is currently underway by the city fire department, department of licenses and inspections and district attorney's office, as well as by the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

"We will fully investigate this tragedy and get to the bottom of what happened: how, when and why," he said. "We will determine further actions that must be taken to prevent such tragedies in the future. The safety of our citizens must always be our No. 1 priority."

Survivor of collapse files lawsuit

More lawsuits could pop up soon after Wednesday's building collapse. / RIKARD LARMA, METRO

Lawyers for Nadine White, who worked at the Salvation Army thrift store, filed a lawsuit Thursday for distress she said she suffered during the Wednesday collapse.

White, 54, a mother of three from South Philadelphia, was buried under rubble for about 15 minutes before she was rescued by a firefighter. She worked at the store for about eight months.

The building owner, Richard Basciano, and his company, STB Investments Corp., are listed as defendants — as is Griffin T. Campbell and his construction company, Griffin Campbell Construction.

White is seeking more than $50,000 in damages for physical and emotional distress.

White's attorney, Robert Mongeluzzi, filed a motion simultaneously to have parts of the scene preserved for evidence.

"There are rules that people are supposed to follow," Mongeluzzi said of the demolition. "And they are not regional or city, but national … and it's clear those rules were not followed."

He would not say whether more people could be added to the lawsuit in the future.

Council bill would pressure owners of vacant property

Use it. City Council President Darrell Clarke introduced a bill to redevelop or pay extra taxes.

City Council President Darrell Clarke said if property owners don't want to sell or redevelop their vacant land, the city would raise its taxes.

Clarke, who advocated for this tax in previous years to no avail, reintroduced the bill in light of Wednesday's building collapse at 22nd and Market streets.

The building's owner, Richard Basciano, has owned properties between 21st and 22nd streets for years without offering plans for redevelopment.

Clarke introduced a bill Thursday that would create a "real estate non-utilization tax" that would target owners who sit on undeveloped land. This new tax would increase taxes annually until the land is sold or developed.

"The longer you hold onto a vacant or unused piece of property, the higher this particular tax will be on top of the property tax they are already paying," said Jane Roh, Clarke's spokeswoman.

The hope is that the tax would increase redevelopment and reduce blight.

In a statement, Clarke offered his thoughts.

"This is a dark week for the City of Philadelphia," he said. "My deepest condolences go out to those who lost a loved one in this profound tragedy."

Compliance. Council cracks down on property tax scofflaws

City Council on Thursday unanimously passed a bill that officials hope would reduce the backlog of delinquent property taxes and promise foreclosure if taxpayers default.

"For the first time, the city of Philadelphia has adopted a comprehensive regime to ensure clear options, procedures and consequences for property owners who are dealing with tax delinquency, a reform that will increase the fairness and efficiency of our tax collections," Councilwoman Maria Quinones-Sanchez said in a statement.

The city would offer specific payment plans to delinquent property owners, but if the payments aren't made, owners would face foreclosure.

The legislation also calls for quarterly reports in an attempt to increase oversight of delinquent tax collections.

Quoted

"It's a pragmatic approach to both ends of the problem: help people who want to pay their taxes and stay in their homes get into a payment plan, and assure scofflaws how and when the city will foreclose." Green

"For those who continue to pretend that paying their property taxes is not a requirement in Philadelphia, including absentee landlords, foreclosure due to delinquency must be certain if we expect to change behavior," Councilman Bill Green said in a statement.

The city's delinquent tax collection system has been vilified as one of the worst in the nation.

Forecast. La Nina more likely than El Nino in Northern summer

The government weather forecaster predicted that extreme conditions are unlikely through the Northern Hemisphere summer, with the La Nina pattern more likely to develop than its more infamous counterpart, El Nino.

In its monthly report based on conditions over the past four weeks, the Climate Prediction Center said a small number of its models predict "weak" La Nina conditions, but most forecasts favor conditions remaining neutral over the summer.

The CPC's previous monthly report on May 9 said data confirmed its forecast that El Nino was unlikely to cause extreme weather in the Northern Hemisphere throughout the summer and into winter. REUTERS

U.S. Senate blocks bills to stop student loan rates doubling

The Senate thwarted two rival bills aimed at stopping interest rates on millions of federal student loans doubling in less than a month.

The defeat of the Democrat and Republican bills will likely lead to a partisan showdown ahead of the July 1 deadline. Both sides agree student loan rates shouldn't go up. They remain gridlocked on a way to avert that. REUTERS

Administration defends phone record collection

Verizon has declined to comment. It remains unclear whether the practice extends to other carriers. / GETTY IMAGES

Opposition. Privacy advocates blasted the order as unconstitutional government surveillance.

The Obama administration on Thursday defended its collection of a massive amount of telephone records from at least one carrier as part of U.S. counterterrorism efforts, re-igniting a debate over privacy even as it called the practice critical to protecting Americans from attacks.

The admission came after Britain's Guardian newspaper on Wednesday published a secret court order related to the records of millions of Verizon Communications customers. The surveillance appears to have involved the phone records of millions of Americans.

A senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, did not specifically confirm the report, but noted the published court order pertains only to data such as a telephone number or the length of a call, and not the subscribers' identities or the content of the telephone calls.

Privacy advocates called for a review of the program amid renewed concerns about intelligence-gathering efforts. REUTERS

"The United States should not be accumulating phone records on tens of millions of innocent Americans."

WATCH OUT: EVEN THE TOASTER HAS EARS

In a weird encounter with time-saving technology, my mother received a robotic sales call that went like this: "We're sorry we've called you at this time. All of our representatives are busy. Please excuse the interruption, and we'll call back." That's right. A machine intruded upon a human's day, then apologized for not having its human ready to talk.

I thought it was funny, but now I wonder if it should have been a warning, because apparently the robots have been monkeying with our phones for some time. There are a great many details we don't yet know about this secret program being run by the National Security Agency, but in an Orwellian nutshell: The government is using computers to monitor millions of us … who we dial, when, where and how long we talk. They say they're not recording our conversations. They're just creating a giant database, so if one of us is suspected in something nefarious one day, they can easily go back and track down our pals.

Quoted

I thought it was funny, but now I wonder if it should have been a warning, because apparently the robots have been monkeying with our phones for some time.

Privacy advocates argue that this is the technological equivalent of putting a police officer outside your door to record every time you come and go … just in case.

I love technology. The fact that I can stream "The Last of the Mohicans" on a tablet in a speeding car is fantastic. My ability to enjoy photos of people's cats in Japan at 3 a.m. is wonderful. And for my money, the creator of the "cellphone light saber" is second only to the guy who discovered the polio vaccine. Throw in the notion that Twitter, Facebook and text messaging may save me from having to actually speak to another human being ever again, and I'm in heaven.

Still, I never forget that each computer or robot, even as it seems to act on its own volition, is actually functioning at the behest of some human, somewhere. So especially in light of this latest news, forgive me if occasionally I stop and stare at the toaster and ask, "OK, what are you really up to?"

Majority of Americans see gay marriage as inevitable

Nearly three-quarters of Americans, including a majority of those who personally object to extending marriage rights to same-sex couples, say legal recognition of gay marriage is "inevitable," according to a survey the Pew Research Center released on Thursday.

The survey found that just over half of Americans favor giving gays and lesbians the right to marry, while 42 percent oppose legalizing gay marriage.

In March, a Pew survey found 49 percent of Americans favored same-sex marriage, and 44 percent were opposed.

Seventy-two percent of those surveyed said they believed legal recognition of same-sex marriage was inevitable, including 85 percent of gay marriage supporters and 59 percent of opponents. REUTERS

N.Y. Post sued for libel for bombing 'Bag Men' story

Libel. The lawsuit names the Post and five of its journalists, and seeks unspecified monetary damages.

Two men whom the New York Post labeled as "Bag Men" in a front-page photo shortly after April's fatal Boston Marathon bomb attack have sued the newspaper for libel.

The Post reported three days after the bombing that federal investigators were seeking the pair, 16-year-old Salaheddin Barhoum and 24-year-old Yassine Zaimi. The story ran just hours before the FBI released photos of the actual suspects they were pursuing.

Barhoum and Zaimi, both avid runners, had gone to watch the finish of the April 15 marathon, which attracts thousands of spectators to downtown Boston. They left shortly after the winners crossed the finish line, and about two hours before a pair of homemade pressure-cooker bombs exploded, killing three people and injuring more than 260.

A massive investigation followed the blasts, the largest attack on U.S. soil since hijackers flew planes into the World Trade Center and the Pentagon on Sept. 11, 2001. Police and FBI investigators called on witnesses from the packed scene to submit photos of the area before the bombs detonated, and early on said they believed the bombs had been carried to the site in bags.

Two days after the blast, Barhoum and Zaimi learned that a photo showing them near the site had been circulated on social media websites, according to the lawsuit. REUTERS

CULTURE

Bernardo Bertolucci: Sorry film. Today, he prefers TV

The Italian filmmaking legend, best known for "Last Tango in Paris," "The Last Emperor" and "The Dreamers," recently confessed he's soured on movies.

"The American films I like now do not come from Hollywood studios but from television series, like 'Mad Men,' 'Breaking Bad,' 'The Americans,'" he said. "Apart from a few independent productions, I think that everything that comes from Hollywood is generally sad. It makes me very sad."

You can do that on television

Acting. More and more film actors are discovering the joys of the small screen.

In case no pundit has told you, we're currently in another Golden Age of television. If more proof was needed, then consider that it no longer has the stigma it once did for actors. Hollywood's best thespians have been slowly gravitating toward TV — not just as guest stars, but as regulars. Consider the following:

Glenn Close

'The Shield,' 'Damages'

Film history: Since 1982's "The World According to Garp," Close has been one of the biggest award-gobblers. She's a six-time Oscar nominee, plus a three-time Tony winner.
Jump to TV: She's also a woman, and today's Hollywood execs don't know what to do with women once they pass 40. Once roles dried up, she appeared first on "The Shield," then on "Damages," which recently concluded its run. At the time it was unheard of that an actress of her stature would do TV. But now it's clear she was ahead of the curve.

Maggie Smith

'Downton Abbey'

Film history: Though a two-time Oscar winner, It wasn't until she was older that Smith became the icon she is today. That happened when she became the catty dowager in Robert Altman's "Gosford Park."
Jump to TV: Re-teaming with "Gosford Park" screenwriter Julian Fellowes, Smith basically re-created her character — although her countess is far less acid-tongued.

Quoted: "I'm not quite sure what [being a star] means. I am familiar to people now, which is what I was not before. ... That is entirely due to the television set." — CBS

Kevin Costner

'Hatfields & McCoys'

Film history: Once upon a time Kevin Costner was the biggest movie star in the world. His fall was mighty, although he's rebounded in supporting roles, as in "The Upside of Anger."
Jump to TV: If a gig on The History Channel sounds like a worse fate than a box office dud, then consider that the show — about the storied warring families — had huge ratings and garnered 16 Emmy nominations, one of which he won.

Quoted: "I won't make a movie unless I have the ability to do it the way I want." - Telegraph

Peter Sarsgaard

Peter Sarsgaard now plays a death row inmate on "The Killing."
CAROLE SEGAL, AMC

'The Killing'

Film history: One of the best actors of his generation (and married to another of them, Maggie Gyllenhaal), Sarsgaard is a stealth movie-stealer. The key is that his looks are deceiving: He looks like a nice guy, but underneath he's capable of much more, be that murder ("Boys Don't Cry"), cool calculation ("Shattered Glass") or lies ("An Education").
Jump to TV: Meaty Hollywood (or even indie) roles are thin on the ground these days. That's one reason he's now on season three of "The Killing," playing a death row inmate soon to be executed for murdering his wife. Alas, that means spending months acting in a tiny cell.

Quoted: "Many of my favorite actors are on television. ... If you want to act with them, you have to be on television." — Metro

matt.prigge@metro.us

Don Cheadle

'House of Lies'

Film history: Of many great performances, please note Cheadle's turns in "Devil in a Blue Dress," "Boogie Nights," "Out of Sight" and "Hotel Rwanda."
Jump to TV: Insanely, it's been a while since he's had a truly juicy film role. Luckily, on Showtime he's a charmingly ruthless management consultant on "House of Lies." Cheadle won a Golden Globe for his work, and the show has just been picked up for a third season.

Quoted: "[An Academy Award nomination] doesn't mean s—. ... I'm doing a TV show now where there's

Dustin Hoffman

'Luck'

Film history: You know, he's Dustin Hoffman.
Jump to TV: Truth is, Hollywood doesn't know what to do with aging men, either. Hoffman could easily coast on small roles in kids' movies. But he hasn't had a real challenge in ages, which would have been "Luck" — had it not been canceled prematurely due to controversy over horses killed on set.

Quoted: "[TV studios] have money, so you're not rushed to shoot 20 pages in a day, like you are with normal TV. HBO leaves you alone and there's no censorship. You do the work you want to do." — Slate

Mira Sorvino

'Gaffigan'

Film history: The daughter of Paul, Sorvino is a talented actress who unfortunately joined the small clique of actors who struggled despite (or because of) winning an Oscar. Few could follow up her feted performance as a ditzy prostitute in "Mighty Aphrodite," but sadly she's largely (but not completely) faded from view.
Jump to TV: Sorvino broke through with a comic performance, so it's appropriate that her most prominent role in years is a comedy show. She will soon play comic Jim Gaffigan's wife on his upcoming semi-autobiographical show. This is great news.

Kevin Bacon

'The Following'

Film history: Bacon is so prolific and versatile that there's even a time-waster game called "Six Degrees of Kevin Bacon."
Jump to TV: Bacon's wife, Kyra Sedgwick, finally achieved stardom with TV's "The Closer." That may be why he teamed up with "Scream"'s Kevin Williamson to play an FBI agent chasing an escaped killer.

Quoted: "Nothing was coming in that I was desperate to do. From the '70s onward, you were able to make films that had violence and edge – and where are they now? They are on television." — Telegraph

Christina Ricci

'Pan Am'

Film history: Child stars and "it" girls don't have long shelf lives. Ricci was both, and perhaps it was inevitable that a series of duds — most notably the Wachowskis' "Speed Racer," which was too insane for mainstream audiences — would cut down on her film work.
Jump to TV: Like many, she found solace on television. On "Pan Am," she played a '60s-era stewardess, in what was a naked attempt to cash in on the "Mad Men" craze, but with more sex and skimpier outfits. The show started strong but was canceled after 14 episodes.

Yeah, it's no 'Wedding Crashers'

Comedy. Vaughn and Wilson reunite, with mostly withering returns.

Vince Vaughn and Owen Wilson take a well-needed break in "The Internship." / PHIL BRAY

Review

'The Internship'

Director. Shawn Levy

Stars. Owen Wilson, Vince Vaughn

Rating. PG-13

In "The Internship," Vince Vaughn and Owen Wilson remind audiences that, even though they haven't paired up since "Wedding Crashers" eight years ago, they can still turn on the chatty, confident charm.

Charm is definitely needed for this, a formulaic, lightweight comedy literally released 10 years too late. Vaughn and Wilson are Billy and Nick, longtime buddies and wristwatch salesmen who awkwardly find out that their company no longer exists in the middle of a sales pitch. Billy gets the rather desperate — but comically appropriate — idea of applying for an internship at Google in the hopes of getting a job there. (He got this idea while looking for jobs on Google, natch.) He convinces his pal Nick to quit his new job and roll the dice.

Of course, once they show up at Google headquarters, they find they're the lone, elder fish in a sea of smart, ambitious guppies. In order for them to get actual jobs, they must team up with a crew of outcasts. Initially, these kids reject them for their antiquated ways. But you know these youngsters won't resist these guys for long, especially when our stars take them to their first strip club, where they get lap dances and tequila shots galore.

Directed by "Night at the Museum"'s Shawn Levy as though he had some time to kill and just needed to get out the house, "The Internship" is quietly deceitful on many levels. Since Vaughn (who co-wrote the script) already starred in "Old School," appearing in yet another farce where he plays the BOMOC (Big, Old Man on Campus) would seem derivative. But make no mistakes about it: "The Internship" is basically "Vince and Owen Go Back to School." There's the uppity mentor type (Aasif Mandvi), who gives our heroes a hard time; the villainous rival (Max Minghella); the fetching, sexy-scholar exec (Rose Byrne) who reluctantly falls for Nick; and even a weird, smart dude (Josh Gad) there to help our boys out in their time of need.

It is easy to dismiss "The Internship" as a two-hour ad for Google. It's also a two-hour recruitment film for Google. Considering that the movie makes the search-engine compound look like the happiest place on Earth — complete with a spiral slide in the lobby, energy nap pods and free food that Vaughn spends most of the movie gorging on — it wouldn't be surprising if Google had application tables set up in multiplex lobbies all over the country this weekend.

But, with its mature-wisdom-always-beats-youthful-ambition vibe, "The Internship" primarily lets all the old, fired/laid-off folk out there know that they still matter in this fast-and-furious world. If Vince Vaughn and Owen Wilson can come back together and work their shtick in a bland, essentially empty-headed film like this one, there's hope for us all.

The second new horrifying Ethan Hawke film

Horror. Despite a questionable premise, "The Purge" is frighteningly smart.

Masked psychos try to invade a home in "The Purge." / UNIVERSAL PICTURES

The scariest movie currently in release stars Ethan Hawke. It's the one where he and the woman he's been with for 20 years fight, and it may or may not end with them splitting up (see page 15). Most movies aren't actually scary, and the ones that are, like "Before Midnight," tend to focus on the unpleasant, cold truths that most people would rather not acknowledge. Scary movies aren't, in other words, horror movies. To wit, the other new film with Ethan Hawke, "The Purge," isn't scary. But it is tense, nerve-wracking and, most shocking of all, a lot smarter than it looks or indeed ever had to be.

The premise is questionable: It's 2022, and America has at some point adopted a program wherein every March, for 12 hours, most crime is legal — including murder. This supposedly allows people to get rid of their violent urges by briefly giving into them. Crime has dropped, as has unemployment.

There are a number of holes in this logic, not worth eating up review space. But it's a good setup for a "Straw Dogs"-like thriller.

Hawke plays against type as a cocksure salesman who settles in for the "holiday" by locking up his family behind armor in their fabulous house. When his young, reliably foolish son lets in a homeless veteran on the run from a gang that has already wounded him, his family finds themselves having to decide: Give the stranger to a mob of young psycho richies in blazers or wait until they break in with reinforcements.

Though its characters aren't always smart, "The Purge" is weirdly intelligent, both in how seriously and thoughtfully it handles its questionable premise and in how it explores audience bloodlust. Once Hawke and fam (including his wife, played by Lena Headey) pick up weapons and go Dustin Hoffman on their intruders, the film reminds us that violent movies, such as this, are an example of our society's own form of purging. Note the inevitable audience cheers as the family dispatches the intruders.

In fact, the most thrilling aspect of the film isn't the threat of invasion. It's how it constantly seems like it will take a turn for the stupid, then finds a way to be smart. This is a cynical film, which believes that most suburbanites, if allowed, would enjoy coldbloodedly taking a life. But it's otherwise levelheaded. It even strongly suggests that the annual purge "works" only because the wealthy are killing off the poor and needy. That "The Purge" keeps its head right till the end is scary in itself.

Once more, with (deeply unpleasant) feelings

Indie threequel. The third film in the "Before" series finds our characters in a sticky wicket.

Ethan Hawke and Julie Delpy reprise their roles as lovers Jesse and Celine in "Before Midnight."
SONY PICTURES CLASSICS

In 1995's "Before Sunrise," Gen X 20-somethings Celine and Jesse (Julie Delpy and Ethan Hawke) met cute on the Eurorail, talked while strolling Vienna and engaged in hot outdoor sex (twice). They didn't reconnect until 2004's "Before Sunset." The new "Before Midnight" reveals that they stayed together since then, not marrying but raising a set of twin girls. On a trip in symbolically bankrupt (but beautiful) Greece, they spend the first half hanging with others. Celine and Jesse only get alone time via an awkwardly scheduled "date night."

Where "Sunset" saw them trying to relive the glories of their past, "Midnight" finds them weary, burdened by all the resentments and various pieces of baggage accrued by two people who've spent years, not just a night or two, together.

It would be cruel to reveal exactly where this goes, but the series has become a portrait of the apathetic nature of time, how it runs roughshod over hopes and dreams. Our once-doe-eyed lovers are confronted with the very real possibility that their affections were misplaced, combined with a fear of realizing this mistake in early middle age.

'An Oversimplification of Her Beauty'

Director: Terence Nance

Stars: Terence Nance, Namik Minter

● ● ● ● ●

"Write what you know" goes the adage preached at many film schools. For their first features, many filmmakers choose deeply, sometimes uninteresting, personal stories. No one has been both as navel-gazing and as unique about it as Terence Nance. Starting with its mouthful of a title, "An Oversimplification of Her Beauty" is relentlessly original, abandoning narrative to adopt an essayistic form that has few close comparisons, if any.

The jumping-off point for Nance's feature debut is the height of TMI banality: A girl cancels a date. A man broods when a one-night-stand calls off a subsequent meet-up. He uses this as an excuse to spiral from one thought to the next, delving into past relationships, his race, his paranoia about "The Cosby Effect" — being a black man in America in an age with fewer real problems than in the past — and some dreamy animated segments.

It's easy to overstate "Oversimplification"'s originality, as though being unique is enough. But its shape-shifting and deconstructive nature beg the viewer to do some deconstructing of their own. Is Nance's film as deep as it thinks it is, or is it distracting us with its relentless creativity? It's a mix of the two, but Nance is that rare type: both artistic and wonky. MATT PRIGGE

'The East'

Director. Zal Batmanglij

Stars. Brit Marling, Alexander Skarsgard

Rating. R

There's such a thing as a radical activist left in America, but you'll learn nothing about it from watching "The East," the second feature collaboration between writer/director Zal Batmanglij and actress/writer Brit Marling. (The first was "The Sound of My Voice.") In the opening, the titular group manages to break into the house of an oil company CEO and pumps crude oil through his vents, flooding his house just as his company's 15 million-gallon leak poisoned the ocean. The image is arresting — like "The Shining" with petroleum instead of blood — but it's totally implausible.

Enter Marling's freelance investigator, who infiltrates the group for corporate clients. It's inevitable that her time embedded in The East will undermine both her faith and her belief in the righteousness of her employers.

Benji and the gang come off like the same kind of idiots as the animal activists led by Brad Pitt in "Twelve Monkeys," but there's no joke intended. (The inadvertently funniest moment is Ellen Page yelling, "This is my jam!") Working through rote ethical inquisition about responsibility, this dull parallel political universe has nothing to tell us about our own. VADIM RIZOV

Gabriel Basso, Moises Arias and Nick Robinson run away from home in "The Kings of Summer." / CBS FILMS

Review

'The Kings of Summer'

Director. Jordon Vogt-Roberts

Stars. Nick Robinson, Nick Offerman

Rating. R

Like many of today's comedies, "The Kings of Summer" features scores of free-association ad-libbing, often by staffers on NBC's Thursday night lineup. But give it credit: It at least has a genuinely silly plot, which is not something you can just make up on the fly. Sick of the mildly tyrannical parenting of his gruff, widowed dad (Nick Offerman), Ohio high schooler Joe (Nick Robinson) convinces longtime bestie Patrick (Gabriel Basso) to run away into the woods. Nestled in the ramshackle confines of a house they will semi-competently build themselves, they plan to spend the summer like Thoreau — which is to say, free of parental overlords. Wielding axes and even a sword, they will become men, or at least grow Williamsburg mustaches.

This adolescent wonderland is ruined by the invasion of girls and hormones. The casual sexism is almost handled well, with the girls getting a few humanizing scenes. Most of what makes "The Kings of Summer" tolerable, though, is that its frequent comic inspiration. Improvised scenes yield gnomic utterances ("Sarcasm is the poor man's wit," says a Chinese food delivery man), while wild card character Moises Arias heroically avoids staleness by finding ever-weirder places to take his character. If it weren't so improv-heavy, it might be less likable.

The National 'laying it all out there' with new album

Indie. "Trouble Will Find" this Brooklyn band, but they will find beauty.

The National play the Mann Center for the Performing Arts (5201 Parkside Ave.) on Friday, June 7, at 7:30 p.m. Go to www.manncenter.org for more information. / DEIRDRE O'CALLAGHAN

Aaron Dessner is on drugs. The National's guitarist had to push back this interview twice because he was visiting the doctor for a stiff neck, which he got under unusual circumstances. "We played the same song for six hours and my back was super tight from that and it never really relaxed," he says. Dessner, who writes most of the music with his brother Bryce, apologizes if he seems a little loopy from painkillers — but he's making a lot of sense discussing the band's brilliant new album, "Trouble Will Find Me."

For you and your brother, this is your first credit as producers.

In the past we've had a lot of engineering help from people, and we also did with this record, but essentially Bryce and I sit around the studio and mess with things all the time and record all of it ourselves and do a lot of the arranging. But the way we made this record is not actually different from the way that we made any of the other ones.

There's a lot of dual voices on this album.

The juxtaposition of other voices with Matt [Berninger]'s voice makes Matt's voice richer, in a weird way, and more beautiful. ... And there were a few places where we wanted female voices.

The defining lyric of the album seems to be "everything that I love is on the table." Do you think that's true?

I think in a way, lyrically, this record is the most verbose, and the most direct and personal, in places. And in a weird way it pretty much encapsulates everything we've ever done. So, yeah, I think that's fair to say that's a defining line.

LISSIE

The folk singer on epic guitar solos, red wine, Metallica and not being able to be 'all Hollywood'

IS 'SHAMELESS'

The first indication that Lissie, who'll be at Union Transfer on Friday, is a down-to-earth chick is that when we call her, she's waiting in line at a gas station bathroom. She asks, with a throaty laugh, if it would be cool if we called her back. Never mind that most touring artists travel on pimped-out tour buses with bathrooms nicer than those in some Allston apartments we've frequented. But Lissie is in her car, having just shot a music video in her hometown of Rock Island, Ill. She shares that she's been on the road for days, promoting her yet-to-be-released sophomore album, which she says is more straight-up rock than her previous indie-folk-centered efforts.

What's the video about?
I feel like where you're from has such a big part to do with who you are. We just walked around to lots of different sites that were memorable and special to me. A friend of mine is a police officer, and once it got dark, he turned on his police lights, which made some really cool lighting.

What's it been like writing this album?
I've had quite a bit of downtime. So the last nearly two years, I've been writing and kind of cultivating some of my other interests.

What kind of interests?
I just got a road bike. I'm not, like, a super awesome pro yet, but I really got into riding. About 20 miles is the most I've ridden. And I've really gotten addicted to so many TV shows. I've gotten really into wine. I drink a lot of wine.

What shows are you into?
Oh, it's like, what shows am I not into! I love "Game of Thrones." I'm really excited about "Arrested Development." I also like "Nashville" a lot. I made my first record in Nashville, and I think they do a good job of showing the city. So yeah, basically, I spend a lot of time drinking wine and watching TV. [laughs] And I've been spending time with my family back in the Midwest.

Speaking of the Midwest, do you feel like you've changed since gaining some fame?
I wouldn't say I feel like the same person, but I don't think that's because anything has changed. I think as you get older, you kind of come into your personality and learn from life experiences. I guess in a way, I put out the single "Shameless" because it's me proclaiming that I don't want to have to be anything other than myself to find success. Even if I wanted to be all Hollywood, I wouldn't know how to do it. And I'm glad that I don't know how to do that.

Have you ever been asked to compromise yourself?
Not that it was asked of me, but I've seen that other people have done it. Say you and some other girl really liked a guy, and she was throwing herself at him all night. And maybe she gets to go home with him, but I don't want to stoop to that level. I just want to be myself, and if he doesn't come home with me, then he's not the right one for me.

That's a cool metaphor for fame.
Thanks! I think in the song, too, I even acknowledge it. Because there's also something where if you are in a situation and two people are going for the same thing, my inclination is to sort of retreat a little bit, where I'm like [puts on bratty voice], "Well, I don't even care, I didn't want to be part of

"My prediction is that the guitar solo is kind of coming back. And I want to be part of that."

Lissie, on what she thinks the next wave of music will be

this stupid club." [laughs]

This is an interesting time for folk music, like how the Lumineers were up for a Grammy — I thought that was unusual.
I did too! I mean, I like that song, and I like them, so I don't mean this in a bad way, but I almost feel like that trend has sort of ended. I think the Avett Brothers and Old Crow Medicine Show started it, and were doing it, and it wasn't mainstream, and then Mumford and Sons really brought that into the mainstream consciousness, which is really great, because it opened the doors for a lot of bands, but I'm not sure that that's where it will stay.

Right. What do you think is going to be the next wave?
My prediction is that the guitar solo is kind of coming back. And I want to be part of that.

Really?
I've been listening to a lot of Hall & Oates, and that music has kind of been resonating with me again. It's kind of dramatic music, and it's a little cheesy, and it's got the epic guitar solos. I think it's so emotionally evocative, it makes you really feel like, "Yeah!"

I love your cover of Kid Cudi's "Pursuit of Happiness." Whom would you want to cover one of your songs?
I think it would be cool if ASAP Rocky covered me. I guess he did cover me — he sampled me. But somebody in a totally different genre. Like Metallica, but that would never happen. I love Metallica.

An 'infamous and famous' opera

Ashley Emerson is the chambermaid and Christopher Tiesi plays the electrician in "Powder Her Face."
KELLY & MASSA

Music. The scandalous "Powder Her Face" made its young composer a star.

When it premiered in 1995, "Powder Her Face" made the then-24-year-old Thomas Ades a star in the opera world. The British composer's unique and inventive music is responsible for its status as a modern classic, but it's one infamous moment that tends to overshadow all else in the popular perception: opera's first onstage act of fellatio.

"It's infamous and famous for that particular sex act," says William Kerley, who directs Opera Philadelphia's version, which opens today. "But any good dramatic telling of a story has to show enough but not too much. If you show too much, then the audience doesn't get to use their imagination and they can feel bashed over the head with the action."

The Opera Philadelphia production stars Patricia Schuman as Margaret Campbell, Duchess of Argyll, who became notorious for her scandal-ridden divorce proceedings in 1963 Britain. Ades partnered with novelist Philip Hensher to create the piece. It's the latest in Opera Philadelphia's Aurora Series for Chamber Opera, which Kerley kicked off five years ago with a production of Britten's "The Rape of Lucretia."

"That was another piece where an incredibly horrible sexual violation happens onstage and you have to figure out a way to stage it which captures the horror but isn't about being obvious," Kerley says. "It's a challenge to stage something that is infamous in such a way that one shows the tragedy of the situation rather than being pointlessly salacious."

Beyond the tabloid highlights, however, Ades crafted a remarkably original score that calls upon a number of unconventional instruments.

"People will be surprised by the number of extraordinary instruments and sounds that are used," the director says. "Thomas Ades doesn't limit himself to traditional sounds. He uses fishing reels, bells going off — it's an extraordinary sound world. I think it's an intriguing evening that passes in a flash, if we've done it right."

The show tells the story of the real-life Duchess of Argyll.
NATIONAL PORTRAIT GALLERY LONDON

The dirty duchess

A true(ish) tale

Kerley delved into as much documentary material on the real-life "Dirty Duchess" as he could get his hands on, though he notes that the opera departs from the true story.

In the first scene, for example, the duchess spills milk on her coat and recoils at the smell.

In actuality, Kerley says, "the real duchess fell 40 feet down a lift shaft in 1943 and banged her head, and ... had problems with her sense of smell and taste. It was said that thereafter she became sexually voracious, though it seems like she was pretty much a goer before then. So you do the research, but then you're liberated from the page to tell the story that this clever novelist and brilliant composer have written for us."

Turning up the heat

Grilling. Chef Barton Seaver shows us that grilling goes beyond steaks and hot dogs.

Move over, hamburger — you're no longer the most important item on the grill.

Acclaimed Washington, D.C. chef and National Geographic Fellow Barton Seaver emphasizes the use of seasonal vegetables and the importance of heat in his new book "Where There's Smoke."

"The heat, with its smoky, sexy undertones, becomes an ingredient itself," he says.

Seaver uses smoke as a baseline component to add richness and depth to food.

"Grilling is perceived as primitive and a masculine way of cooking," he says. "There's incredible nuance to grilling and to using heat. We have to learn how to read heat and control it."

A common mistake often made when barbecuing is to put all the coal in the middle of the grill. Seaver recommends distributing the coal all over for better control of the fire and temperature.

For the chef, grilling is also a way to coax more interest in vegetables.

"In America, we love crunch and texture in food, and we can get that through veggies," he says.

Grilling season coincides with the time most vegetables are at their peak.

"Every vegetable can be grilled," says Seaver. "If you burn your broccoli, that's good. It just adds more flavor."

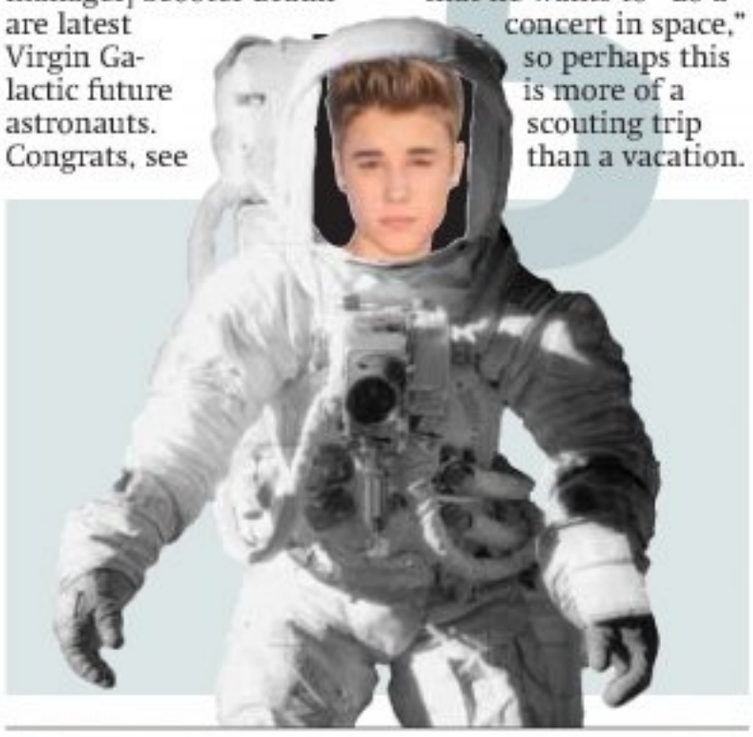
Esther Williams dead at 91

Esther Williams, one of the biggest box-office stars of the 1940s and 1950s, died on Thursday. She was 91.

The wholesome Williams was the star of such Technicolor "aquamusicals" as "Hollywood's Mermaid" and "The Queen of the Surf." Her typical finale featured the star "diving into a pool or lagoon and surfacing to a crescendo of music with water drops glistening on her smiling face and sleek body," as Reuters succinctly put it. The popularity of Williams and her films even created a home swimming pool boom. The cause of her death was old age, her publicist said.

Justin Bieber goes to space

Justin Bieber has booked a spot on a Virgin Galactic suborbital space flight, according to Virgin founder Richard Branson. "Great to hear Justin Bieber and [his manager] Scooter Braun are latest Virgin Galactic future astronauts. Congrats, see you up there," Branson posted to Twitter this week. Bieber seemed to confirm the news by re-tweeting the mogul's sentiments. Back in February, Bieber tweeted that he wants to "do a concert in space," so perhaps this is more of a scouting trip than a vacation.



Everyone is weighing in on Amanda Bynes

Amanda Bynes' behavior is drawing the attention of media — and a few celebrities. Nicole "Snooki" Polizzi thinks the actress's antics would best be showcased on a reality show. "I think she needs a reality show, because I would watch it all the time," Snooki tells E! News. "If she needed help, I would wish that she would get it, obviously, but she's entertaining. She's my guilty pleasure on Twitter." Meanwhile, Kathy Griffin thinks she has it all figured out. "So Amanda Bynes is allegedly doing stuff like going shopping, locking herself in dressing rooms for two hours and crying — do you know how many times I've wanted to do that? That sounds like a dream!" she quips in her latest comedy special. As for Bynes, her latest communication was complaining about Us Weekly. "I hate the pictures @ usweekly chooses of me when they write an article about any tweet I write. They hate me, so they pick unflattering shots."

Update on Paris Jackson's condition after suicide attempt

After reportedly attempting suicide early Wednesday morning, Paris Jackson, daughter of the deceased pop icon Michael, is on a 72-hour psychiatric watch at an unnamed California hospital. Paris' aunt La Toya Jackson and mother, Debbie Rowe, spent the better part of Wednesday at her bedside. According to TMZ, Paris, 15, was taken out of her Calabasas, Calif., house on a stretcher and rushed by ambulance to a nearby hospital. Audio from the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department radio dispatch revealed that she "OD'd on 20 Motrin and cut her arm with a kitchen knife."

Perry Sanders, an attorney for the Jackson family, released a statement about the incident: "Being a sensitive 15-year-old is difficult no matter who you are," the statement said. "It is especially difficult when you lose the person closest to you [her father]. Paris is physically fine and is getting appropriate medical attention."

Who do Metro readers want to scrump?

Last week, in our annual Sex issue, we conducted a survey to see which celebrities you would most like to sleep with. Your answers were not quite what we expected. For the people choosing women, 18 percent of you said Christina Hendricks, whose closest competition among the 19 other women to choose from was Beyonce, who received 10 percent of the votes. So that's a little bit surprising that so many more of you like Joan Holloway better than Sasha Fierce, but the biggest shock came from readers choosing men. Out of 20 dapper dudes (and a few goofballs thrown in for good measure), there was a 12 percent tie between Bradley Cooper and Aziz Ansari. Yes, you read that correctly: You people would rather get down with Tom Haverford than with the likes of Ryan Gosling, Channing Tatum and Jon Hamm! Weirdos! All of you! (But that's why you're the best.)

Cowboys, cowgirls and Nelly do Wednesday's CMT Awards

'Red' with envy

1 Taylor Swift rocked out while performing "Red" at the CMT Music Awards, the annual awards show held in Nashville.

Country strong

2 Nicole Kidman accompanied husband Keith Urban on the red carpet.

The gambler

3 Carrie Underwood accepted the award for Video of the Year for "Blown Away" from Kenny Rogers and Sheryl Crow.

Proud parents

4 Just two months after they welcomed baby Lincoln into the world, Dax Shepard and Kristen Bell had a night out on the town.

Crossover success

5 Nelly walked the red carpet. The rapper later joined Florida Georgia Line onstage for their song "Cruise."

A little rock 'n' roll

6 Miranda Lambert and Lenny Kravitz hung out backstage. "I just got a kiss from Lenny Kravitz," Lambert said as she took the stage to accept the award for Performance of the Year. "That was an award in itself."

Horoscope

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Instead of dwelling on what you don't have, be appreciative of what you've got. Gratitude builds friendships.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Even if certain companions sometimes annoy you, concentrate on appreciating what they do right. Stay on the sunny side.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. If you have to work with someone whom you've disagreed with in the past, try to let bygones be bygones.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Be careful about how you treat a workplace rival. Be a gracious competitor.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Even if you believe your ideas are far superior to those of your companions, you should treat them fairly. A balanced conversation will only improve everyone's thinking.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Try to think beyond the material. Don't be concerned about how much you can get, but about goodwill.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan 20. If you are too forceful and insistent, you're apt to be disappointed. People won't want to follow a domineering leader.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18. Though you're aware of the plight of someone who has helped you in the past, you might take no action to alleviate matters.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Your reputation could be shaky, so tread lightly. Behave as if the whole world is just waiting for you to make a mistake.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. No argument is worth the cost of losing a friend, especially if the issue is completely unimportant.

Not a laughing matter

Re: And so it begins: Paris Jackson's suicide attempt (Metro, June 6) Just wanted you to know how s— your article about Paris Jackson made me feel. From your perspective, she could have the best life in the world — but that doesn't delegitimize her experiences. Suicide is real. Sarcasm is tasteless way to talk about it.

Nothing's OK in Turkey

Currently the mainstream global media is keeping an eye on Taksim, Istanbul.

Thus, the police forces have backed off and they have scaled down the attacks against protesters.

However, in the meantime, the terror in Ankara is on a much larger scale.

Tear gas is being thrown inside apartments, people are hit by plastic bullets, illegal custody and assault.

Is Mayberry evolving into Phils regular?

MLB. The outfielder is earning Charlie Manuel's trust, and playing time, by getting big hits in key spots.

Mayberry is heating up.
GETTY IMAGES

It's no secret. Charlie Manuel likes to go with the hot hand. The Phillies manager talks about it, and he proves it when writing out his lineup card. It was no surprise that John Mayberry Jr. has been seeing his name pop up almost every day.

Mayberry single-handedly beat the Marlins last Tuesday by tying the game in the ninth with a pinch-hit home run. Mayberry followed by drilling a walk-off grand slam, the first for the Phillies.

"The second one, I was trying to be aggressive within a certain zone, and put a good swing on it," he said.

Manuel likes to talk about how Jayson Werth went from part-time player to a starting outfielder.

Even after a disappointing 2012 season when the starting job was his to lose, Manuel never closed the door on Mayberry.

"If Charlie were to stick with John Mayberry night after night, I really believe he could become a starter and a very good one," MLB analyst Mitch Williams said. "Just give the guy a chance."

Merion set to make new memories

Golf. Tour professionals reflect on the challenges Merion Golf Club presents to the world's best golfers.

The name Merion was special to Bill Rogers and George Burns long before they battled it out in the 1981 U.S. Open and tied for second behind David Graham.

Now, they hope nothing will change when the pros tee it up for the 2013 Open next week.

"The first Open I played in was the '71 Open at Merion," said Rogers, then a sophomore at Houston. "I look back on that quite fondly, because it kind of validated the next step for me was playing professionally.

"I have not been back since '81. I hope they haven't had to change it so much it lost its personality. That first teeing area was so close to the club, I remember teeing it up next to someone eating a sandwich."

Burns had played Merion prior to the '81 Open, and he immediately loved the place. He hopes that affection will be rekindled among today's players.

"It's one of the most traditional golf courses, with so much history," said Burns. "I think the history there kind of puts you in a bit of a cloud. I think it will be a good tournament. I hope it plays hard and fast for them. I don't want them to shoot the place up."

Rogers, the 1981 Player of the Year, is confident the USGA won't let that happen.

"I know the USGA will want it fast and running," said the 61-year-old. "I remember the greens as treacherous. Just a real challenge. But the golf course, barring any weather events, can hold its own."

NFL. Eagles pack up as players wait for Camp Kelly to begin

The Eagles broke minicamp Thursday, leaving players to their own devices for the next six weeks. When they return, they'll enter Chip Kelly's first training camp as a NFL head coach.

Jobs will be on the line, for real. For Kelly, it will be his first time deciding who gets dumped to the scrap heap.

"There are 90 guys here when we start camp July 25, and there are going to be 53 when the season starts," Kelly said. "That is just the reality of it. They know that going in, and they understand that."

Kelly handed out strength and conditioning programs to his charges before they left. While NFL rules forbid player-coach interaction until camp opens, they will be expected to work out on their own.

"They have a program," Kelly said. "By league rules, it's not like we can say, 'Let's meet at these certain times.' They can lift here, but we can't have any instruction with them or anything like that. They're on their own to work out." METRO

NBA

Dr. J says he's not a fan of Bynum deal

Julius Erving said his former team made a bad deal when it acquired Andrew Bynum. He said the Sixers should have been more careful.

"If you're going to deal with the Celtics who are our natural rivals, or the Lakers, the two teams that have won the most championships in the NBA, they're always going to make deals where they get the better end of the deal," he said.

A new documentary on Erving's life, "The Doctor," will premiere on NBA-TV Tuesday night. METRO

MLB

A-Rod not talking about PEDs

Alex Rodriguez refused to comment Thursday on the performance-enhancing drug scandal he is at the heart of.

Rodriguez and 19 other baseball players are facing suspensions up to 100 games for ties to a Miami clinic.

"Myself and others are being mentioned in a media report before the process is even concluded," Rodriguez said. "I would hope this thing would follow the guidelines of our Basic Agreement. I will monitor the situation and comment when appropriate." METRO

EQUAL HOUSING OPPORTUNITY

PUBLISHERS NOTE

All real estate advertising herein is subject to the Federal Fair Housing Act of 1968 and state and local fair housing laws. The Fair Housing Act makes its illegal to advertise any preference, limitations or discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, handicap, familial status, or national origin or an intention to make any such preference, limitation or discrimination. State or local laws may make unlawful advertising that discriminates on the basis of age, marital status, or sexual orientation. Metro US will not knowingly accept any advertising for real estate which violates the law. The law requires that all dwellings advertised are available on an equal opportunity basis. If you have any questions regarding housing discrimination, call the Long Island Housing Services at 1(800) 660-6920 in Long Island or the Anti-Discrimination Center at (212) 346-7600 in New York City. To file a complaint call HUD toll-free at (800) 669-9777 or the New York City Commission on Human Rights at (212) 306-7500
